and substitute therefor --The polyimide material can be used in a cast or can be formed as a cast for the casting of other materials. The defraction grating being transferred in this way is present inside the cast as the material to be cast is poured in and then hardened to take the shape of the polyimide material and/or the relief of the defraction grating present in the cast. Once released from the cast, the object (for example a CD cover) will have the image present on the original object.--
